

ABSTRACT

This invention relates in general to data communications, and in particular, to the delivery of video over a data network. It discloses a communications protocol for use 5 with high performance imaging systems networks providing multi-point-to-multi-point connection between the video sources and the receiving host. The protocol is useful for imaging systems that deliver all the video information reliability in real time to the receiving host.